Suggested Addition to the FY 1976 DCI Resource Management Objectives

The current objectives tend to focus on the Intelligence Community's view of itself, rather than on the user's view. Both perspectives are essential management resource objectives. It is suggested that the following objective be added to the five already in the existing draft.

"Objective No. 6

Survey the attitudes of users of intelligence to determine their feelings as to the adequacy of the intelligence data received, and as to gaps in the quality or coverage of the intelligence data provided. Identify and correct problems in the flow of intelligence information to the user, and in the user's ability to make his requirements known on a timely basis. Identify and correct areas where compartmentation within the intelligence community may limit the quality or comprehensiveness of the data provided to the user. Provide support to efforts to develop new analytic or modeling techniques that use intelligence to ensure a suitable interface between the development of new planning and analysis techniques and the ability to provide the intelligence support required."
